Q&A

Chris Harrison

The* Bachelor in Paradise *finale airs Sept. 7

Why has Paradise been such a hit?

Yes, there are tears and drama, but at the end of the day, it’s an opportunity to find love. It’s why we’re there! I’ll be disappointed if this season doesn’t end with an engagement.

Samantha is the surprise villain, right?

She’s the puppet master! The evolution of Joe from bully to this sad figure was so compelling. It’s incredible to watch.

Are your kids (Joshua, 13, and Taylor, 11) fans?

I watch with my daughter. It opens up a dialogue and allows us to communicate about things that might be awkward. —AILI NAHAS

Anna is going to stay with her husband no matter what he does. I feel very sorry for her and what her children are going to learn, from her example, about how women should be treated. So sad for those children.

Two two-word phrases spoken by two incredibly brave men 14 years apart: "Let's roll" by Todd Beamer on 9/11/01 and "Let's go" by Alek Skarlatos on 8/21/15, sparked heroism in others to follow in selfless acts in efforts to save others from disasters.

CHARGED Green (above), an ex-host on Barton's public-affairs show, is accused of assaulting him.

Sex Scandal Sinks Mayor

Larry Barton, whom we wrote about in our Aug. 31, 2015, issue after an assault on him raised allegations he was caught on a sex tape with a former friend's wife, is out as the mayor of Talladega, Ala. On Aug. 25, two weeks after the Aug. 8 attack, voters rejected his bid for a fifth term, electing Jerry Cooper Sr. by almost 2 to 1. Barton, 75, denied the alleged affair, but tells People, "I'm sure that turned some folks upside down." He also drew critics by challenging a decision that had stripped powers from his now-ceremonial office—an action taken by the city council after Barton was convicted in 1995 of stealing $5,900 from the city; he won re-election after serving three years in prison. "People have been good to me," says Barton, who was subpoenaed last April to testify in the divorce of his accused assailant Benny Green, 71. "I can't complain."

MTV VIDEO MUSIC AWARDS!

L.A., Aug. 30

With Miley Cyrus hosting, the 32nd annual awards were bound to be unpredictable. Missed the show? We've got you covered.

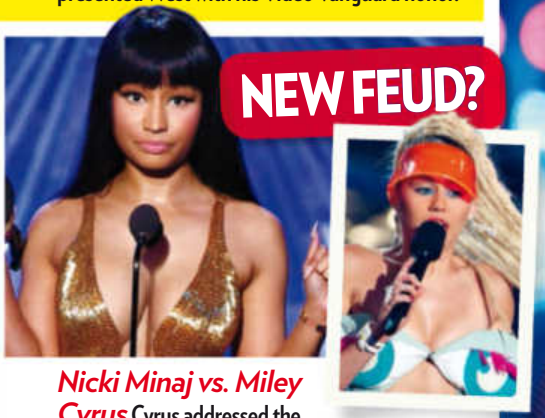
FEUDS RESOLVED

Taylor Swift vs. Nicki Minaj

When Video of the Year nods were announced in July, Minaj took to Twitter, venting that her "Anaconda" clip was snubbed because it didn't feature women with "very slim bodies," a tweet nominee Swift thought was a dig at her. After some back-and-forth, the two made up—and buried the hatchet for good, performing Minaj's "The Night Is Still Young" and Swift's "Bad Blood" to open the awards.

Kanye West vs. Taylor Swift

At the 2009 VMAs, the rapper stormed the stage as Swift accepted her Video of the Year Moonman, a trophy West famously told the then-country star (and the world) that Beyoncé deserved instead. The reconciled duo showed off their budding friendship when Swift presented West with his Video Vanguard honor.



NEW FEUD?

Nicki Minaj vs. Miley Cyrus

Cyrus addressed the Minaj-Swift spat in a New York Times interview (calling the rapper "not too kind"); Minaj called Cyrus a "b---h" while accepting her VMA. An MTV source says the tiff is "very real"; a Minaj source says "Nicki was joking."

I'MA LET YOU FINISH…

"I have decided, in 2020, to run for President," Kanye West declares, at the end of his 10-minute Video Vanguard Award acceptance speech. The rapper's lengthy talk touched on everything from fatherhood and the injustice of awards shows to his status as a millennial.

WEDDING BELLS ARE RINGING!

AMY PURDY & DANIEL GALE

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 29

Former Dancing with the Stars contestant Amy Purdy, 35, and her boyfriend of 14 years, Daniel Gale, 39, made their wedding a family affair. The snowboarder (who, after a battle with bacterial meningitis, now has two prosthetic legs) tells People her sister Crystal, an interior designer, planned most of the "outdoorsy, bohemian" celebration. The former Amazing Race contestants were wed at the Barn at Hidden Springs by one of Purdy's best friends and exchanged custom Neil Lane bands (right). "It was perfect," says Purdy.

We love the outdoors. So we want to incorporate that—maybe make it a weekend and have all the guests go on a hike. Or there's a crazy obstacle course at this one location," she says. "It's going to be a fun wedding."

Chung and her pals share a laugh while roasting marshmallows.

SANDRA BULLOCK'S HOT NEW ROMANCE

BY MIA McNIECE

LEAVING CRAIG'S restaurant in L.A. on Aug. 27, Sandra Bullock had a huge smile on her face—and with good reason. The Oscar winner, 51, had just finished a cozy dinner with her new boyfriend, L.A.-based model-turned-photographer Bryan Randall, 49. "He had his arm around her the entire meal," says a fellow diner. "He was rubbing her arm, kissing her shoulder and at one point they cuddled up closer to look at something on her phone."

The couple, who met through friends, have been spending the past few months getting to know each other—and it's clear the relationship is heating up. Bullock introduced Randall to pals Jennifer Aniston and Justin Theroux at a July 4 party at her home in Austin, Texas. "Jen and Sandra are great friends now, and Jen's very happy that Sandra is dating," says a source. A month later Randall accompanied Bullock to Aniston's surprise wedding on Aug. 5. "Sandra looked great and introduced Bryan to everyone," says the source. "She was smiling and acted very bubbly. Wedding guests commented on how happy she looked."

"He's a good guy, and she's America's sweetheart," a Randall family friend says of the couple. Inset: a 2011 modeling pic of Randall.

It's Bullock's first public romance since she went through a painful divorce from husband Jesse James in 2010. When it comes to dating, "I don't want someone with a 12-pack, I mean if it comes, okay," she joked to People this spring. The 6'3" Randall doesn't lack in the looks department: He has an extensive modeling career dating back to the 1990s, posing for brands such as Hugo Boss and Saint Laurent and appearing with Cindy Crawford and Marloes Horst in recent international editions of Harper's Bazaar. Like Bullock, who dotes on her 5-year-old son Louis, he is also a proud parent, to a college-aged daughter. He's from Portland, Ore., and he comes from a close-knit family. "He's a great guy and had a great family life growing up," says a family friend. "His parents are amazing people. Everyone is really proud of him for being a talented photographer and model and thinks it's great he's dating [Bullock]." While the relationship is still in the early stages, Bullock appears to be very happy indeed. Says the diner who spotted the couple at Craig's: "She definitely seemed comfortable and relaxed with him by her side."—REPORTING BY MELODY CHIU, JODI GUGLIELMI AND PERNILLA CEDENHEIM

JOSH DUGGAR

IN REHAB AND UNDER FIRE

AS JOSH SEEKS TREATMENT AMID THE CHEATING SCANDAL, HIS IN-LAWS SAY THEY WANT HIM TO 'DISAPPEAR'

THE REVELATIONS WERE SHOCKING. And in the week following Josh Duggar's confession that he had been leading a secret double life—addicted to porn and cheating on his wife, Anna—the oldest son of former 19 Kids and Counting stars Jim Bob and Michelle Duggar entered a faith-based rehab facility, Rockford, Ill.'s Reformers Unanimous, "to begin a long road towards wholeness and recovery," his parents wrote in a statement. But the reality star, 27, who also dealt with scandal in May, when it was revealed he had molested five underage girls, including his sisters Jill, 24, and Jessa, 22, as a teen, continues to draw ire from members of his extended family. "Some in Anna's family would really like him to just disappear," says a source close to her. "It doesn't seem like she's going to leave him, but they're just hoping [with him gone] she will be left alone to figure out her own feelings on this matter." Michael Seewald, the father-in-law of Josh's sister Jessa, who had previously vigorously defended the family, even took to his blog to blast Josh, saying "by his hypocrisy, he blasphemed the name of God.... I am profoundly grieved." But even as the family is left reeling ("It's like we're all in the midst of a tornado," says a source close to the Duggars), his devout siblings are standing by him. "You just have to keep your focus," Jessa told People at a speaking engagement Aug. 29, "and trust God." —JANINE RAYFORD RUBENSTEIN

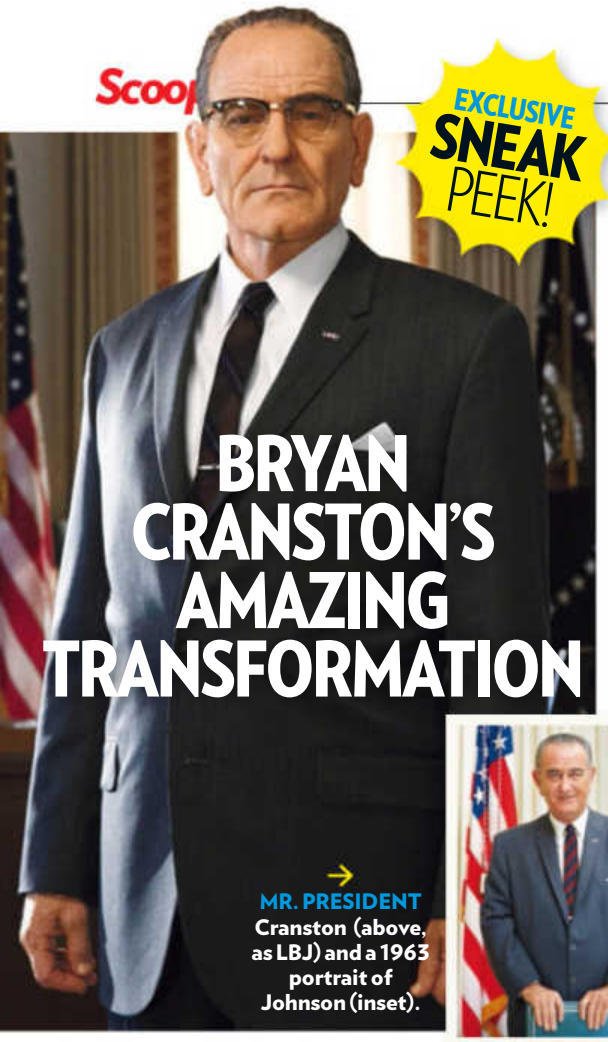
BRYAN CRANSTON'S AMAZING TRANSFORMATION



MR. PRESIDENT Cranston (above, as LBJ) and a 1963 portrait of Johnson (inset).

IS THAT REALLY THE GUY FROM BREAKING BAD?

Emmy-winner Bryan Cranston, 59, who nabbed a 2014 Best Actor Tony for his role as President Lyndon Baines Johnson in All the Way on Broadway, is reprising the role in an HBO biopic airing in 2016. In his critically acclaimed stage performance, "Bryan was mesmerizing—brilliant, funny, larger-than-life—even from the back row," says Jay Roach, who is directing the film. "That's all still here, but with our camera, LBJ also charms you from very up close." The film chronicles the 11-month journey from when Johnson took office after President John F. Kennedy's 1963 assassination to his own election. Says Roach: "Bryan channels LBJ completely." —MARY GREEN

A.J. JACOBS

JORDIN SPARKS

CHAT WITH MY FAMOUS COUSIN...

Author A.J. Jacobs is building the biggest family tree ever—240 million so far!—and writing a book about his adventure. Each month he interviews one of his favorite cousins for People. This month: Jordin Sparks, who just released her latest album, Right Here Right Now.

AJ: You are my aunt's fifth great-aunt's husband's third great-niece's husband's cousin, five times removed.

JS: Holy moly, that's crazy. I'm never going to remember that.

AJ: You're also a distant relative of Donald Trump. Any words of wisdom for the Republican candidate?

JS: Goodness gracious. Just to make sure he has a good hairdresser so when he has speeches outside, it doesn't fly off.

AJ: You are also linked to Simon Cowell.

JS: That makes sense, actually. Maybe that's where my no-filter mouth comes from. Sometimes I can say things without thinking.

AJ: Your dad was a pro football player. Any of the athletic genes get passed down?

JS: I was actually a pretty good softball player. I did want to play football when I was younger, and my parents said no. So I said, "Okay, then, I'll sing," and it worked out pretty well.

AJ: A lot of your ancestors were potato farmers.

JS: We love potatoes. If we could eat meat and potatoes every day, we would.

AJ: How are your farming skills?

JS: I have a pot of strawberries in my backyard. I'd love to live on a farm and grow my own vegetables and raise animals. Maybe one day after I'm done singing.

AJ: What advice has your family given you?

JS: When I was doing American Idol, my dad said, "Jordin, it's like football. There's always somebody coming up behind you that's bigger, faster and stronger. You just need to focus on what you're doing and not worry about them." So I did. I just tried to top myself from the week before.

AJ: I researched the name Sparks, and it comes from an old Norse word for lively and vivacious.

JS: I think that applies very well. My whole life I've always been asked if that was my real name, and I'd always tell people, "Do you want to see my ID?"

AJ: The name Jordan comes from the river Jordan in Israel. In Hebrew, the word "Jordan" means flow.

JS: I'm liking these definitions! A flow that's lively and vivacious. That's a pretty good definition of me.

HULK HOGAN

'MY BIG MISTAKE'

THE WRESTLING CHAMPION APOLOGIZES FOR RACIST REMARKS THAT NEARLY DESTROYED HIM

Since he began in professional wrestling in the late '70s, Hulk Hogan has weathered his fair share of broken chairs and bruises. But these days, the 12-time world heavyweight champion is fielding blows that are far more damaging than any he's ever faced in the ring. In late July the WWE summarily ended its almost 30-year association with Hogan (whose real name is Terry Bollea) after the National Enquirer released an audio transcript of him using the N-word in reference to his daughter Brooke's boyfriend at the time.

Now a humbled Hogan says he has learned from his mistakes. "I'm not a racist," insists Hogan, who's also in the midst of a $100 million lawsuit against Gawker Media for releasing footage of him in a 2007 sex tape. "I said something horrible," he tells People, "and whether it was yelling it from the top of the Empire State Building or in a private setting, it was wrong."

Even so, according to Hogan, 62, family and friends like George Foreman and Dwayne Johnson have stuck by him. Most importantly, so has Brooke. "If anyone should have kicked me to the curb," he says, "it should have been my daughter. But she came to me with nothing but love."

"We got past this horrible thing a long time ago," says Brooke, 27, an aspiring country singer who just released a new single, "Girlfriend." "It's important that people understand that this one incident isn't reflective of who he is as a person."

Hogan, who says he grew up in a racist environment in Port Tampa, Fla., wants to use the controversy to show fans the real man behind the brawn. "I had to reeducate myself," he says. "So for me to digress and say something so foul is devastating. Now I get to help people and explain to them that even when they're in the locker room, talking smack is not cool.... If they can learn anything, maybe they can learn by what happened to me."

—CAITLIN KEATING

"He's a great dad who is really supportive of me," says Brooke (with Hulk in an August Instagram post).

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

The actor at a fund-raiser with his mom, Donna.

Michael B. Jordan

The actor, 28, promotes awareness of lupus and raises money for research

My mom has lupus, so I was looking for charities that spoke directly to her. When I came across Lupus LA, I wanted to know how I could get people to be aware of the disease and help find the funds for research. Growing up it was hard to watch my mother in pain and at times not able to walk. I have more of those memories than I would care to. But she always had a smile on her face, even when she didn't feel well, and she is always the first person to ask you if you need help. I think that's the biggest thing—she showed me what true strength is. Lupus LA gives grants and emergency funds to families that can't afford medicine and enables them to get the best treatment possible. In an ideal world we would be able to build a private research facility dedicated to finding a cure. If you have loved ones struggling with lupus, lend a hand and support them as much as you can. Sometimes they're just too proud to ask for anything, but they appreciate it.

Tributes

WES CRAVEN, 76

The acclaimed writer-director passed away in Los Angeles on Aug. 30 after a battle with brain cancer. Craven, who hailed from Cleveland, is credited with defining—then redefining—the horror genre with slasher films like A Nightmare on Elm Street (featuring the iconic Freddy Krueger, below), Scream and The Hills Have Eyes. Craven, whose career spanned more than four decades, was still hard at work, developing several new horror shows for TV including a remake of the cult classic The People Under the Stairs. Following the news of his death, Scream alum Courteney Cox took to Twitter to honor the filmmaker, writing, "Today the world lost a great man, my friend and mentor. My heart goes out to his family." Academy Award nominee Ronee Blakley, who starred in A Nightmare on Elm Street, remembers Craven in a statement to People as "one of the great auteurs of our time." He is survived by his wife, Iya Labunka, son Jonathan, daughter Jessica and stepdaughter Nina Tarnawksy.

Craven's classics inspired generations of horror fans.

KYLE JEAN-BAPTISTE, 21

The up-and-coming theater star died after falling from a fire escape in Brooklyn on Aug. 28. Jean-Baptiste was the first black actor and youngest man to play Jean Valjean in Broadway's Les Misérables.

MARCY BORDERS, 42

Borders—known as the "dust lady" in the iconic 9/11 photo taken in the aftermath of the 2001 terrorist attack on the World Trade Center—died on Aug. 24 after a yearlong battle with stomach cancer.

DARREN H. GOFORTH, 47

The sheriff's deputy was gunned down in Harris County, Texas, while refueling his patrol car on Aug. 28. Authorities said Goforth was "a target because he wore a uniform."

DR. WAYNE DYER, 75

The motivational speaker and author of the 1976 best-seller Your Erroneous Zones died on Aug. 29. While the cause of death is not yet known, Dyer was diagnosed with chronic lymphocytic leukemia in 2009. His family broke the news on Facebook, writing he "had no fear of dying."

A DOZEN COOL THINGS TO SEE, HEAR, READ AND DOWNLOAD THIS WEEK

CLIFF LIPSON/CBS/LANDOV

No. 1 The Late Show with Stephen Colbert

Expect reports of his CBS debut to be glowing

TV TALK On paper (or Microsoft Word) Colbert would appear to be a wonderful successor to David Letterman as Late Show host. His nine years on The Colbert Report showcased a nimble, cheerful interviewer with a quicksilver but fully formed comic mind. (How easy could it have been to sustain a parody of a FOX commentator all that time?) What sets him apart from his new rivals, the Jimmys, is a similarity to Dave. Colbert, now 51, seems to have emerged from (and matured in) a world that exists outside celebrity: He's more gentleman and citizen than star. True, his first guest is George Clooney, but that's an FCC requirement. On-camera, as on paper, he will be wonderful. He just will. (CBS, Sept. 8, 11:35 p.m.)

No. 2 Doll & Em

Emily Mortimer and Dolly Wells, still winningly silly

TV COMEDY At the start of season 2 of this charming, surprisingly delicate series about two BBFFs—the first "B" is "British"—Mortimer (playing herself) is staging a play cowritten with her former gofer Dolly (Wells). The project doesn't go well. Emily is distracted by auditions for a sci-fi film, while Dolly constantly undermines herself with a bizarre contrariness. "I don't really want to know," she says when Ewan McGregor tries to explain a movie scenario, "but I'm quite curious." She's also touchingly vulnerable. Shampooing lice from her hair, she coos, "Poor little things. You've come such a long way." She unconsciously means herself. (HBO, Sept. 13, 10:30 p.m.)

No. 4 Longmire

NETFLIX DRAMA This fine modern Western deserved a new place to roam—A&E dropped it because it skewed too old for advertisers—and now it's landed even more acreage on ad-free Netflix. Wyoming sheriff Walt Longmire, so weather-creased his face could use an ironing, is a dogged, old-school lawman, but there's a cloud of personal trouble shadowing his brow. Robert Taylor is perfect in the role. (Launches Sept. 10)

No. 3 Nick Jonas, 'Levels'

MUSIC POP In this follow-up to last year's "Jealous," Jonas continues to up the funk factor (and flaunt that flawless falsetto). It's a pulsating come-on, catchy enough to get anyone moving, whether that means gyrating on the club floor or seat-dancing in transit. If he keeps churning out sexy, throwback bangers like this, he'll climb to Justin Timberlake's level of post-boy-band fame.

Carrie Underwood 'Smoke Break'

A twangy anthem inspired by the singer's humble beginnings

MUSIC COUNTRY Underwood harks back to her Oklahoma roots on this new single, the first off her upcoming fifth studio album, Storyteller (due Oct. 23). While her recent pop- and rock-tinged hits have been more mainstream, Underwood powers through "Smoke Break" with the unabashed twang that made her such a beloved American Idol winner. The lyrics are also in a nostalgic, heartfelt vein, celebrating folks like her small-town working-class parents. This one's best enjoyed turned up with a cold one after a long day.

An unbroken spirit remembers her Oklahoma home.

No. 6 The Slow Mo Guys

YOUTUBE

COMEDY Like many YouTube stars, Gavin Free and Daniel Gruchy (6 million subscribers) have an elemental, maybe juvenile concept: They film dopey stunts with a slo-mo camera. Ketchup is shot from a homemade cannon. Gruchy pulls a condom over his head and Free fills it with water until it explodes. Everything is reduced to a beautifully geeky shower of drifting particles. (youtube.com/user/theslowmoguys)

No. 7 Pickle and Peanut

TV

CARTOON While Pixar creates impeccable digital-movie classics like Inside Out, TV is where traditional animation has turned upside down. P&P is about the bromantic escapades of, yep, a goober and a brined cucumber. In the premiere, Pickle befriends a pimple (his own), then he and Peanut break into a jail for once-sweet grannies. It's nuts. And pickles. (Disney XD, Sept. 7, 9 p.m.)

No. 8 Justin Bieber, 'What Do You Mean'

Bieber returns—and he means business

MUSIC POP This comeback single opens with a ticking clock, a playful reminder that the former teen idol hasn't released new solo material in three years. A bouncy dance jam with exotic flourishes (panpipes?!), this is all-grown-up Bieber at his best, belting lovesick lyrics over an irresistible hook. His vocals will have you dancing through the night and taking him seriously again.

No. 9 Hand of God

AMAZON DRAMA Sons of Anarchy star Ron Perlman ditches the motorbike but keeps the patriarchal scowl in this provocatively peculiar new series. He's Pernell Harris, a judge spurred on by mystical visions to pursue a murderous vendetta—assisted by a killer (Garret Dillahunt) who's also warped by religious zeal. Hand doesn't fully grasp the frightening depth of this idea—it can feel as if Robert Duvall's Apostle evangelist were doing a cameo on Bates Motel—but the acting has a nasty power that bites clean through. (Launches Sept. 4)

Dana Delany plays the morally corrupt wife of vengeful madman Perlman.

No. 10 Iris

STREAMING DOCUMENTARY Two icons unite in this sumptuous film: fashion maven Iris Apfel and director Albert Maysles. Charting Iris's rise from industry insider to Metropolitan Museum of Art star (an '05 show of her accessories was a smash) to nonagenarian celebrity (she's 94), the film takes on a bittersweet tone with the recent deaths of Maysles and Iris's husband, Carl. But Iris is, at heart, a celebration. (Also on DVD)

Efron as a music man in a risky romance groove.

No. 11 We Are Your Friends

MOVIE DRAMA Zac Efron plays Cole Carter, an aspiring deejay who can't resist the persistent pounding of a strange new beat—only this time it's coming from his heart and not his EDM. The down note is that he's caught in the middle of a love triangle with his deejay mentor James Reed (Wes Bentley) and Reed's girlfriend Sophie (Emily Ratajkowski). With a boldly emotional Efron in command, Friends should resonate with millennials of all ages. (In theaters, R)

Lisbeth Salander is back! Plus an affecting transgender tale and a story of loss and healing EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

BOOK OF THE WEEK

Alex Gino George

NOVEL Just 10 years old, George leads a tortured existence, misunderstood by adults who don't see what George knows for sure: She is a girl trapped in a boy's body. This insightful novel about a transgender child bravely challenging her birth gender is written for older grade-school kids, but it'll resonate with anyone who has ever felt different.

Bill Clegg Did You Ever Have a Family

NOVEL June loses everything—her lover, ex-husband, daughter and daughter's fiancé—in a fire hours before her daughter's wedding. In measured prose, Clegg unspools the stories of June and the other survivors as they face unimaginable horror and take their first halting steps toward hope and community.

David Lagercrantz The Girl in the Spider's Web

THRILLER Lisbeth Salander's days seemed numbered after the 2004 death of The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo author Stieg Larsson, but the ferocious cyberpunk is back thanks to Lagercrantz, who has nimbly picked up the series. This time, Lisbeth goes after the NSA while trying to protect a traumatized boy with autism. Bonus: more of Lisbeth's backstory, bringing new dimension to the riveting heroine.

PRESSURE TO BE PERFECT
"I have no doubt that Rose and Joe were clear with her that she had to behave in public," says author Larson of Rosemary (in 1931 and, inset, with JFK). "It must have been exhausting."

ca. 1935

FAMILY REACTION
Several Kennedys wouldn't talk to Larson, but Anthony Shriver was eager to help with the book (out Oct. 6). "He said, 'We'd like to know what happened to her as well.'"

KENNEDY FAMILY SHAME

Hidden Daughter

By ELIZABETH McNEIL

In pictures she looks every bit the perfect Kennedy: radiant, freckled, destined for a charmed life. But the truth about Rosemary, the third of Rose and Joseph Kennedy's nine children, was far darker than it appeared. Born with intellectual disabilities her parents were determined to keep secret, she struggled to keep up with her highly competitive siblings. And when she became harder to control—and sexually attractive—her father subjected her to a lobotomy at age 23 that left her with the mental capacity of a toddler. After the surgery she was hidden from public view at St. Coletta, a Catholic school for the disabled, in Jefferson, Wis.—a fate apparently kept from even her siblings for two decades. Now, for the first time, her full story is being told. In The Missing Kennedy (see box), Elizabeth Koehler-Pentacoff shares memories of visiting Rosemary at St. Coletta, where Koehler-Pentacoff's aunt was one of the nuns who cared for her. Kate Clifford Larson had access to new historical sources for her book Rosemary: The Hidden Kennedy Daughter (excerpted here). Together the biographies paint a devastating portrait of a fragile life cut short. "Reading her letters, you see how lovely Rosemary was," Larson says. "She was a wonderful child who fell victim to the times and the ambitions of a powerful family. It's just tragic."

BLENDING IN
1. Rosemary with Jack at their 1928 confirmation. 2. The Kennedy kids in 1928 (from left: Jean, Bobby, Patricia, Eunice, Kathleen, Rosemary, Jack and Joe Jr.). 3. Rosemary (with her dad in 1939) "needed her sisters' help putting on lipstick," says Larson. 4. At her 1938 debut before the British monarchy, Rosemary (with Kathleen, left, and Rose) tripped and stumbled in front of the King and Queen, despite weeks of practicing her curtsy.

On Sept. 13, 1918, Rose Kennedy went into labor. Her nurse called the obstetrician to come to the family home in Brookline, Mass., but the doctor was delayed. Trained not to deliver babies without a physician on hand (in part, perhaps, because his fees were not paid unless he was present for the birth), the nurse made a fateful decision.

She tried to keep Rose calm, encouraging her to fight the urge to push. It was well understood that preventing the movement of the baby through the birth canal could cause a lack of oxygen, exposing her to possible brain damage. Yet the nurse demanded that Rose hold her legs together tightly in the hope of delaying the baby's birth. When that failed, the nurse resorted to another, more dangerous practice: holding the baby's head and forcing it back into the birth canal for two excruciating hours.

When the doctor finally arrived, "a dainty girl was added to the nursery," as The Boston Globe announced. Apparently healthy at birth, Rosemary soon began displaying worrying signs.

"She crawled, stood, took her first steps, said her first words late… she had problems managing a baby spoon," Rose wrote [in her 1974 memoir]. Rose later noticed that Rosemary "could not steer a sled," nor easily master childhood sports, nor write on paper easily.

When Rosemary's kindergarten teachers wouldn't promote her to first grade, Rose consulted experts and was told her daughter was "retarded."

Mental "retardation" and "arrested growth" were not well-defined diagnostic terms then, and were used broadly and carelessly to describe a variety of conditions. Rose and Joe were determined that Rosemary be treated just like the other children. If they were to reveal that their daughter was "defective," they risked being ostracized and shunned.

To those outside the family, Rosemary seemed much shier and less coordinated than her outgoing brothers and sisters. But her prettiness, seemingly happy disposition, and carefully disguised intellectual disabilities masked the seriousness of her condition.

As the years passed, Rosemary's deficits became harder to conceal. Her sister Eunice remembered her suffering what seemed to be seizures, and she was prone to tantrums. When she was 11, Rose and Joe sent her to the first of a series of boarding schools for intellectually challenged students, but she never progressed beyond the third- or fourth-grade level. She wrote heartbreaking letters home.

"Darling Daddy," the then-16-year-old wrote in 1934. "Thank you for coming down to see me. I would do anything to make you so happy. I hate to Disappoint [sic] you in any way. Come to see me very soon. I get very lonesome everyday."

In 1938, when Rosemary was 19, Joe was named Ambassador to Great Britain, and the family moved to London. Rosemary thrived at a nurturing convent school she attended there. She also gained a few pounds, a family no-no.

Rosemary knew her father disapproved of the few pounds she had put on [during a trip]. "I am so fond of you," she wrote to him. "Sorry. to think that I am fat you. think." Joe wrote to the school, "…She is getting all together too fat and I told her in no uncertain words."

Back in the U.S. after World War II broke out, Rosemary became increasingly troubled and hard to manage.

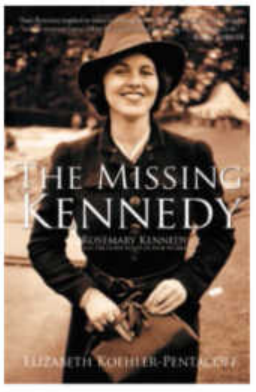
Rose's niece Ann Gargan later revealed that Rosemary became incorrigible at her D.C. school. "Many nights," Gargan told historian Doris Kearns Goodwin, "the school would call to say she was missing, only to find her walking around the streets at 2 am." In Joe's mind, Rosemary's escapes left her vulnerable to sexual exploitations. Joe was beginning to chart his sons' political futures and could not risk an unwanted pregnancy. But keeping her out of the public eye was proving impossible.

In early 1941 Joe spoke to Rose about an experimental brain surgery called the lobotomy, which purportedly helped make mentally ill patients less moody. At Rose's request their daughter Kathleen researched the procedure, which the American Medical Association had warned against, and told her mother, "It's nothing we want done for Rosie."

'I realized at an early age that Rosemary was not like the others'
—ROSE KENNEDY



MEMORIES OF "ROSIE"
Author Elizabeth Koehler-Pentacoff often visited her aunt Sister Paulus, who was Rosemary's caretaker. "They were as close as sisters," she says.

After Two Decades, a Fraught Reunion

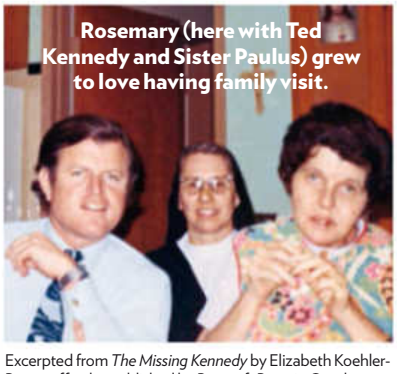
AFTER JOE KENNEDY'S STROKE in 1961, Rose and the rest of the family discovered Rosemary's whereabouts. When Rose visited Saint Coletta for the first time, Rosemary and two nuns met her at the Milwaukee airport. Rose hadn't seen her daughter in twenty years. Would Rosemary even remember her? When Rosemary saw her mother, she ran to her. The nuns quickened their pace, their dark robes flapping after them. Mrs. Kennedy opened her arms in greeting as Rosie raised her arms, but the reunion quickly took an ominous turn. Rosie beat her mother's chest with her fists, shrieking with a primordial, "AAAARRRCK!"

The nuns tore Rosemary from her shaken mother. The lobotomy had not erased the past twenty years from Rosemary's memory. She knew her mother had not been there when she needed her most.



Rosemary (here with Ted Kennedy and Sister Paulus) grew to love having family visit.

UNBREAKABLE BOND
Eunice and Rosemary in 1938, and decades later, at a Kennedy family reunion. Eunice credited Rosemary with inspiring her to found the Special Olympics, for athletes with intellectual disabilities.

If Rose told Joe her misgivings about the surgery, he didn't listen. Without informing her, he ordered the procedure be done as quickly as possible.

In November 1941, Dr. James Watts drilled holes on both sides of Rosemary's head. He inserted a flexible spatula into her cranium near the frontal lobes, turning and scraping as he moved deeper. Psychiatrist Walter Freeman [who had pioneered lobotomies in the U.S.] asked Rosemary to tell him stories, repeat the months of the year. With the fourth cut, she became incoherent. She slowly stopped talking.

Rosemary emerged almost completely disabled. She would never recover the full use of her limbs. She walked with one leg and foot turned awkwardly in. She would have only partial use of one of her arms. She could speak only a handful of words.

Rosemary spent seven years in a New York psychiatric facility. In 1949 she was moved to St. Coletta, a Wisconsin school for the disabled; Joe never saw her again. There is no record of Rose visiting her until the early '60s, after Joe was disabled by a stroke. Rosemary's siblings were not told the truth about her fate.

Jean remembers being told that Rosemary "had moved to the Midwest and become a teacher." Teddy feared he "had better do what Dad wanted or the same thing could happen to me."

Rose claimed to her niece Ann Gargan that she was kept in the dark about the lobotomy for twenty years. But clearly she was not in the dark after the surgery. As this wealthy, politically powerful Kennedy generation's influence was growing, Rosemary posed a challenge, one that was met with the oft repeated false claim that she was teaching at a school for handicapped children in the Midwest and preferred her privacy.

Though Rosemary remained institutionalized until her death at 86 in 2005, her life improved in the '70s. With Joe no longer able to insist that she be kept out of public view, family members began seeing her in Wisconsin and bringing her home for visits. Rosemary's times with her mother, though, often seemed strained.

'At St. Coletta Rosie loved parties. And the guys—she'd flirt'
—ELIZABETH KOEHLER-PENTACOFF

One day, while Rose was swimming with her secretary Barbara Gibson in the pool at Hyannis Port, Rosemary's aides encouraged her to get in too. She refused. Gibson watched as Rosemary looked "straight ahead, like a child who has been punished." Rose whispered, "Oh Rosie, what did we do to you?"

Eunice went furthest in welcoming Rosemary back to the fold. Eunice's son Tim Shriver recalls his aunt's visits to their home when he was a child.

Though her language was terribly limited—often she repeated the words "babies, mother, Eunice"—he remembers she loved to take walks, swim and play cards. She loved to be "prettied up" and was easily brought to smiles by a compliment about her hair or outfit.

In 1962 Eunice broke the family's public silence about her sister, writing a piece for The Saturday Evening Post but not mentioning Rosemary's lobotomy, which finally came to light in Doris Kearns Goodwin's 1987 The Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys. Rose, who died in 1995, gave speeches about "mental retardation" that referenced Rosemary, but she never told the full truth.

"Her mind is gone completely," she told her biographer Robert Coughlan in 1972. "But that was due to an accident which I don't really discuss." Rose told Coughlan that the survival of Rosemary and the loss of three of her sons "is a puzzle . . . why God took three sons who were equipped and wanted to work for . . . humanity, and left my daughter who is incapacitated? But, as I said, this is one of those thing about life . . . God's ways we can't always understand." ●

Jennifer Lawrence & Amy Schumer New BFFs!

DANCING ON PIANOS! MAKING HUMAN PYRAMIDS! HOW TWO OF HOLLYWOOD'S BIGGEST STARS BECAME VERY FUNNY FRIENDS

'Amy and I were creatively made for each other. We have different flavors'
—JENNIFER LAWRENCE

They're famously fans of raunchy humor, reality TV—and, it turns out, each other. Now Jennifer Lawrence and Amy Schumer have turned their girl crush into a beautiful—and very funny—friendship. They're even writing a screenplay together, in which they'll play sisters. "They are both crazy and no-holds-barred," says an industry source. "It's a wonderful connection." After seeing Schumer's hit film Trainwreck, Lawrence, 25, e-mailed the comedian, "I guess I should just say it: I'm in love with you," she told The New York Times. Schumer, 34, described Lawrence to Jon Stewart as "the coolest chick you'll ever meet." Since then the duo have campaigned for Schumer to be the Bachelorette and jumped onto Billy Joel's piano to dance to "Uptown Girl." "They share a love for the outrageous and no fear of expressing it," says a source close to Lawrence. "These girls were made for each other."

THE SCENE

THE VICTIMS
Clockwise from left: Parker worked at WDBJ for a year; Ward was a cameraman and occasional sports reporter; Gardner has been director of the Chamber of Commerce since 2002.

2 YOUNG JOURNALISTS ARE FATALLY SHOT BY A DISGRUNTLED EX-COLLEAGUE—ON LIVE TELEVISION BY STEVE HELLING

As news stories go, it looked like it would be an easy assignment. Reporter Alison Parker and cameraman Adam Ward left the WDBJ newsroom in Roanoke, Va., just after 4 a.m. on Aug. 26 to interview Vicki Gardner, director of a local Chamber of Commerce, about the 50th anniversary of nearby Smith Mountain Lake. It was a cool summer morning, and Parker and Gardner happily chatted about local tourism while Ward ran the live feed to viewers. But the picturesque setting quickly turned into a bloody crime scene: Seventeen gunshots rang out, spraying the threesome with bullets while horrified viewers watched live. As Ward lay wounded on the ground, shot in the head, his camera caught a grainy glimpse of the fleeing gunman. It was the last image that thousands of viewers saw before the station cut back to the chaotic newsroom, where no one knew what had happened. "I thought it was a car backfiring," says anchor Kimberly McBroom. "I was not thinking gunshots. The control room was trying to text, and I thought Adam would text back. It was right after we got off the air that we heard from the police."

The news from the lake was heartbreaking: Parker, 24, and Ward, 27, both shot in the head, died on the scene. Gardner, 62, shot in the back, was airlifted to a nearby hospital. And even the most seasoned reporters at WDBJ were not prepared for the next blow: The gunman was former WDBJ reporter Vester Flanagan, 41. The newsman, who had used the name Bryce Williams on air, had executed his former colleagues in cold blood—angered, he said, at his 2013 firing from the station. Shortly after the attack, Flanagan took to social media to claim responsibility. "I filmed the shooting," he said on his Twitter feed. Seconds later he posted two graphic videos of the murders, taken on his own phone, in which he approaches the victims and wordlessly opens fire with a Glock 9-mm. As Parker begins to scream, the scene fades to black. Almost five hours later, Flanagan was found in a rental car with a self-inflicted gunshot wound; he died at a local hospital.

The shootings left the WDBJ family and its viewers struggling for answers. "Never could I have imagined something like this could happen," says McBroom, "especially two years after he was let go." Minutes after posting the videos, Flanagan faxed a 23-page rambling manifesto entitled "Suicide Note for Friends and Family" to ABC News in New York. In it he complained of being discriminated against as "a gay black man in America" and described his pent-up rage. "I've been a human powder keg for a while, just waiting to go BOOM! at any moment," he wrote.

A graduate of San Francisco State University, Flanagan had a troubled past: According to two sources and his own Twitter account, he worked as a gay male escort from 1995 to '97, and when his mother, Betty, a teacher, died in 2008, "he just withdrew to himself," says Shaun Barton, a childhood friend. "You could tell he was in a lot of pain." By all accounts Flanagan had a difficult tenure at WDBJ, marred by internal strife and angry outbursts. After he was fired, "he seemed like he could snap at any moment," says former fellow employee Nick Beaty, 25. "We had to call the cops to get him out of the station." According to station manager Jeff Marks, Flanagan threw a wooden crucifix at his fellow employees and yelled, "You'll need this."

As those close to the victims grapple with their sudden loss, they remember the energetic, ambitious journalists who were at the beginning of their careers—and lives. Both Parker and Ward were dating people from work: Ward was engaged to morning producer Melissa Ott, and Parker had recently moved in with WDBJ anchor Chris Hurst. "The grief comes in waves for me, and the waves seem like they are 100 feet tall," says Hurst. "It's not even that they are coming less frequently. They are coming all the time."

Parker's father, Andy, 62, mother, Barbara, 65, and brother Drew, 28, share memories of the girl they called Scooter, who liked to make banana pancakes and bacon—and who loved her job. "Alison excelled at everything she ever touched; she was a force of nature," says Andy, who has become a gun-control advocate since the shootings. "Alison and Adam were kind, loving people who were doing their jobs, and they were gunned down. It was just meaningless."

Melissa Ott, who was planning a South Carolina beach wedding with Ward next June, witnessed her fiancé's horrific death from the station's control room. "She's devastated right now," says McBroom. "Adam wanted to be a dad, she wanted to be a mom, and they were not going to wait a long time to have kids. It's so tragic."

Meanwhile, Gardner's relatives are keeping a vigil at her hospital bedside. The mother of two and grandmother of three, who lives on Smith Mountain Lake, lost a kidney and part of her colon but is expected to recover. "My mother is amazing," says her daughter Erin Gardner Arnold, 33, who adds that the family is trying not to dwell on the shootings. "We're really focused on her trying to get better," says Erin. "We don't need any more hate. We're moving on with love from here on out."

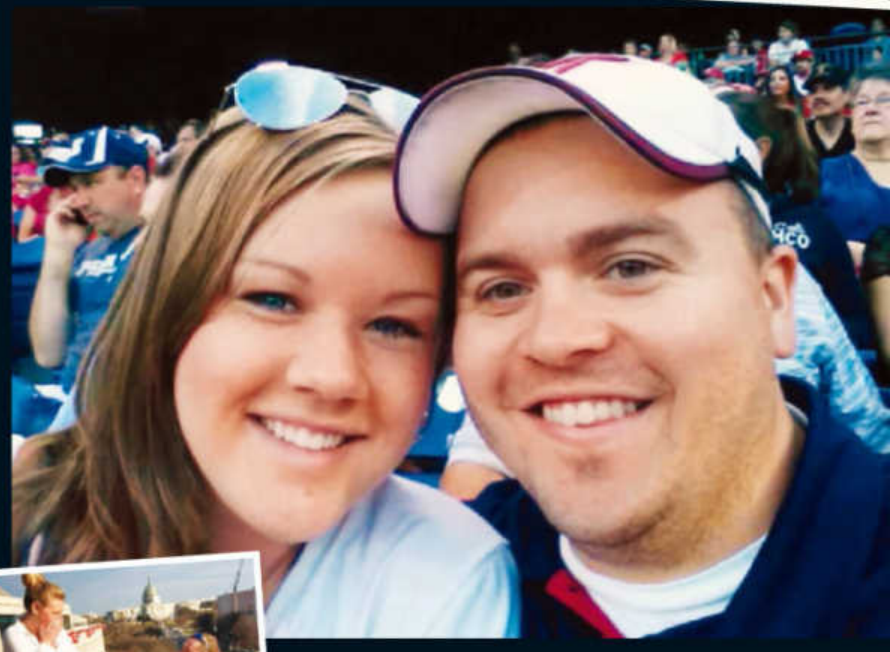
LOVE STORIES CUT SHORT

ALISON PARKER AND CHRIS HURST
Sparks flew between the reporter and the anchor almost immediately. "We knew almost from the moment we started to date that we would love each other forever," says Hurst. "We moved in together at the beginning of August to save money to buy a house and a ring. We were there for the long haul."



ADAM WARD AND MELISSA OTT
Ward and Ott, a producer at WDBJ (in photos shared on Facebook), "were best friends," says friend Kimberly McBroom. "They were very much in love and very excited about their wedding and their future."

TENNIS STAR RAFAEL NADAL STRIPS DOWN IN A NEW AD FOR TOMMY HILFIGER—AND PROVES HE'S EVEN HOTTER OFF THE COURT BY JESSICA FECTEAU

A 14-time Grand Slam champion, Rafael Nadal is best known for the power and passion he brings to every stroke of his game. But thanks to a steamy new ad campaign from Tommy Hilfiger, these days he's also serving up some serious sex appeal. Flashing a flirty smile and a rack of rock-hard abs, the 29-year-old Spaniard had no trouble baring his all during the shoot near his hometown of Manacor on Spain's island of Mallorca. "We had some fun," says Nadal, who does a slow striptease in the TV spots before playfully tossing his tighty-whities at the camera. And the tennis star, who will be front and center at the US Open this month, is already planning his next big move: opening a tennis academy for young players on Mallorca in May 2016. "I've had the chance to enjoy a lot of very special experiences in my career," he says. "It's great to feel the support of the people when you're on court." ●

THE Queen YOU'VE NEVER SEEN

SHE LOVES CORNFLAKES—AND DOWNTON ABBEY. INSIDE THE HIDDEN LIFE OF THE RECORD-BREAKING MONARCH

By SIMON PERRY

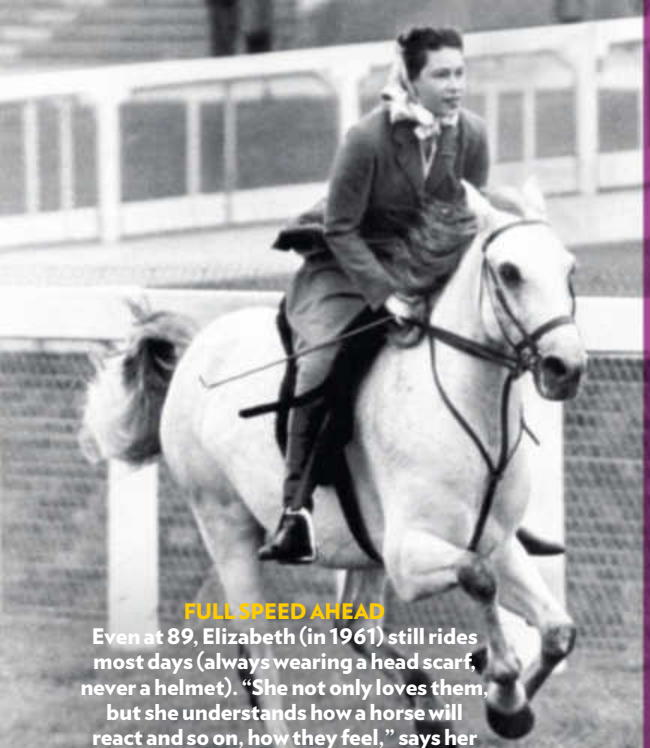
When Queen Elizabeth settles in front of the television at Windsor Castle to watch one of her favorite shows, Downton Abbey, she's hardly a casual viewer. A regular visitor to Highclere Castle, which stands in for Downton on the series, "she knows the place inside and out," says her longtime biographer Brian Hoey. "She loves to pick out mistakes!"

A "stickler for detail," as Hoey puts it, the famously stoic monarch, 89, also possesses a side rarely seen beyond the palace walls: quirky, loving and not

YES, SHE SNUGGLES! She cradled her infant son Prince Andrew in this 1960 portrait. Her third child is often said to be her favorite—but, her cousin Margaret Rhodes says, "she loves them all deeply."

CECIL BEATON/CAMERA PRESS/REDUX; INSET: CHRIS JACKSON/WPA/NUNN SYNDICATION



FULL SPEED AHEAD
Even at 89, Elizabeth (in 1961) still rides most days (always wearing a head scarf, never a helmet). "She not only loves them, but she understands how a horse will react and so on, how they feel," says her former stud manager Sir Michael Oswald.

THE LETS-HER-HAIR-DOWN QUEEN

Back when she was merely a princess, Elizabeth enjoyed a "jolly" country childhood "of picnics and paddling around and watching people shooting," says Margaret Rhodes. She's taken that into adulthood, along with a love of wartime big-band music, says biographer Brian Hoey. She "can't stand" opera but enjoys show tunes. "Her favorite song, which she and Philip call 'their song,' is 'People Will Say We're in Love' from Oklahoma," says Hoey.

DANCING QUEEN
Enjoying downtime with the crew of the HMS Vanguard during her family's tour to South Africa in 1947, Elizabeth is almost unrecognizable. "She loves the big-band sound," says Hoey.

CORGI CUDDLE
Elizabeth (as a princess in October 1937) has owned her favorite breed since she was 7. "She adores anything with four legs," says Seward.

afraid to get her hands dirty (on occasion). Now, as she becomes the longest-reigning monarch in British history—on Sept. 9, at 63 years and 216 days, she surpasses previous record holder Queen Victoria—those who know her best say the mother of four will shrug off the milestone. "She won't be thinking about the record," says her former stud manager Sir Michael Oswald. "She's a very self-effacing person."

In the course of her six-decade reign, which began in 1952 when she ascended the throne at just 25 following the sudden death of her father, King George VI, the world has radically changed—but her daily routine has remained remarkably fixed. A creature of habit, she rises at 7:30 every morning to her vintage Roberts radio broadcasting BBC's Today program. ("She loves to hear the politicians squirm," says Hoey.) She pores over the famous "red box" of government documents delivered daily and enjoys a breakfast of cornflakes alongside her husband of 68 years, Prince Philip. "What's not said enough is that she'll be looking after the house and seeing if guests are okay," her cousin Margaret Rhodes, 90, tells People. "She combines the role of sovereign with the other side of life."

The same woman who's happiest with mud on her wellies also delights in having "tiara time," when she uses tiny tools to tweak her jewels. An earthy animal lover, she's also an avid stargazer. "She has met all the astronauts," says Ingrid Seward, author of the new book The Queen's Speech. As for emotional displays, she has cried only twice in public, says Hoey: "When one of her horses had to be put down and when a royal yacht was decommissioned. But that was a very windy day." ●

5 FUN FACTS About the QUEEN

- She's a superb mimic.
- She can identify passing aircraft by sound.
- She drinks Twinings English Breakfast tea (milk, no sugar) every morning.
- She can distinguish hundreds of military medals.
- Her favorite President is George H.W. Bush. (They are close pals!)

SUMMER VACATION

DRIVING INSTRUCTOR
In 1952 the young mom helped 3-year-old Prince Charles test-drive a toy car at Balmoral.

PLAYTIME
"She was much more hands-on with Andrew and Edward [pictured in 1965]," says Seward.

MONARCH MOM

For Elizabeth, much of the daily parenting of her four children—Charles, Anne, Andrew and Edward—was relegated to nannies. "She was a very, very busy working mum," says Seward. "If she wanted to see her children, she had to schedule in a time." Still, in the preface to a new book, her grandson Prince William, 33, writes that "her love of family and home are all attributes I experience firsthand."

A RARE SILLY MOMENT
"When she came to the throne, Anne and Charles (pictured with Elizabeth in 1954) had to take second place," says Seward. "She was a Queen with two young children at 25. That had never happened before."

FAMILY MEAL
Anne, the Queen, Charles and Philip gather around the table during filming of the 1968 BBC documentary Royal Family. "The others tell jokes at the expense of each other, but nobody tells a joke at the Queen's expense," says Hoey.

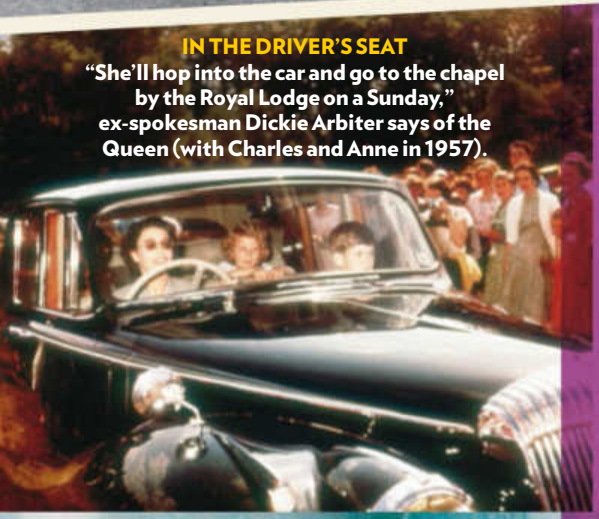
SIGNATURE ACCESSORIES
With corgis and her ever-present handbag, the Queen handled her own dog-walking duties on a London runway in 1969.

TAKING AIM
Her gloves never come off in public—even when she put her finger on the trigger during a visit to the Army Rifle Association in 1993. And yes, she's a good shot, with lots of deer-stalking practice.

THE HANDS-ON QUEEN

Carrying out nearly 400 public duties a year, Elizabeth is also known to hop behind the wheel and take up a rifle on occasion. At 89, she also still loves to travel abroad. "She won't 'do' retirement," says Oswald. "As long as she is able, she will continue." Adds former Palace staffer Colleen Harris: "She has really shaped the role in a way that the public have grown to love."



IN THE DRIVER'S SEAT
"She'll hop into the car and go to the chapel by the Royal Lodge on a Sunday," ex-spokesman Dickie Arbiter says of the Queen (with Charles and Anne in 1957).

SHE WAS A MECHANIC!
Enlisted in the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service during WWII, she later celebrated victory with her sister Princess Margaret secretly on the streets. "All of us [were] just swept along on a tide of happiness and relief," she said.

WORKING PARTNERSHIP
Her most trusted adviser, Prince Philip is often by her side or a step or two behind, per royal etiquette. "She lights up when he walks into the room," biographer Sally Bedell Smith says of Philip (with the Queen in '69). "She becomes happier."

The girls, whose toy-soldier outfits won best costume for their age group at the festival, say only one person can tell them apart. "Only our best friend can figure us out," says Gina. "She knows us even by the back of our heads." While some things about being a twin are annoying (like having to share gifts), for the most part it's fun, they say. "One time I was trying on sunglasses, and there was no mirror," says Dina, "so I asked my sister to put the glasses on. My mom thought that was really funny."

The sisters, who speak five languages, hate being apart, so they travel the world together as Spanish vocalists. "No one can replace the love and bond that we have for each other," says Marita, who was born first. "We have so much trust between us, and our adventures have been so unique." Those adventures started even before Mimina was born. "The doctor did not know there was a second baby and had taken his gloves off and walked away," says Mimina, "and everyone was yelling to him."

The "Italiano Twins," as they've been known all their lives, can't explain why they've sent their mother the same birthday card even though they live hundreds of miles apart. "And once, we sent her the same Hummel collectible figurine," says Rose. "Those are things my sister and I still laugh about." But they learned early on how to make the most of being twins. "We were so ornery," says Charlotte. "We used to switch places all the time, whether it was standing in for a test or switching up dance partners."

↓ ONE FAMILY, FOUR SETS OF TWINS!

The Lutz/Royal clan includes two pairs of first-cousin identical twins, one set of fraternal twins and another set of identical twin toddlers (a brother also just had twins). Yet they still come to the festival each year to hang out with even more twins. "It's like having a community of your own people who understand who you are and what you go through," says LaQuala Lutz, 33, of Campbell, Ohio. My American Dream

GREAT SUCCESS AGAINST ALL ODDS

SKIN-CARE MOGUL, PHILANTHROPIST
Jane Wurwand

JANE WURWAND DOESN'T REMEMBER her father's dying of a heart attack when she was just 2 years old. But what came after left an imprint: her homemaker mom working the night shift as a nurse to keep her four girls fed. "I knew we had to budget every penny," says Wurwand, 57, who later saved $2,800 to emigrate from the U.K., become a U.S. citizen and found Dermalogica, a $250 million skin-care company based in Los Angeles and sold in more than 80 countries. "America is like the golden ticket in Willy Wonka's chocolate bar," she says. "Dreams come true here."

A Mother's Love
Her electrician father died shortly after the family had moved into a new house—and he hadn't yet signed the mortgage insurance policy. Her mother—who hadn't worked in 16 years and didn't drive—began working long hours, often napping with her daughter during the day. "My mom," she says, "set this incredibly strong work ethic."

Scrappy Start
As a 4-year-old kindergartner, Wurwand earned two pennies a day fetching rolls from a bakery for her teacher Miss Dee: "She must have known I needed it." Embarrassed at having to use subsidized-lunch tickets at school, she started earning her own money at age 13, working odd jobs at a hair salon.

Risking It All
At age 25, after attending beauty school, she took her aesthetician license and one suitcase and moved to L.A. with her now-husband, Raymond. Using a $25 mailing list from the California licensing board, she began offering $10 classes in advanced skin care to fellow cosmetologists and started the International Dermal Institute. Dermalogica followed in 1986.

A Shared Road
In 2011 Wurwand, who never attended college, founded the nonprofit Financial Independence Through Entrepreneurship (joinfite.org), providing small-business loans to 62,000 women worldwide. "Their story is my story—my mum's story," she says of her IDI students and loan recipients. And it's her own backup plan: "No matter what happens, I know I can always find a job because I can still wax a bikini line in under seven minutes."

LEGAL NOTICE

If You Purchased a Product That Contains Flexible Polyurethane Foam, Such as a Mattress, a Couch, or Carpet Underlay, You Could Be Eligible to Receive Money by Participating in Nine Proposed Class Action Settlements Valued at $151,250,000.

TO DETERMINE IF YOU ARE ELIGIBLE TO RECEIVE MONEY, READ BELOW.
YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS ARE AFFECTED.
PLEASE READ THIS NOTICE CAREFULLY.
To File a Claim, Visit www.PolyFoamClassAction.com
Para una notificación en español, llamar o visitar nuestro website.

Who is paying the settlement money?
A lawsuit known as In re Polyurethane Foam Antitrust Litigation, Case No. 10-MD-2196, is pending in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio in Toledo. The Court previously approved Settlements with two Defendants in the lawsuit: Valle Foam Industries, Inc. and Domfoam International, Inc.

Additional Settlements have now been reached with the following Defendants: (1) Carpenter Co., (2) FFP Holdings LLC, (3) Future Foam, Inc., (4) FXI Holdings, Inc., (5) Hickory Springs Manufacturing Company, (6) Leggett & Platt, Incorporated, (7) Mohawk Industries, Inc., (8) Vitafoam (Vitafoam Products Canada Limited, and Vitafoam, Inc.), and (9) Woodbridge (Woodbridge Foam Corporation, Woodbridge Sales & Engineering, Inc., and Woodbridge Foam Fabricating, Inc.). Together, these "Additional Settling Defendants" will be paying a total of $151,250,000 into the Settlement Fund. There are no other Defendants that have not settled.

What is the lawsuit about?
Several individuals and businesses ("Plaintiffs") brought claims on behalf of a Class of end-user "indirect" purchasers of products that contain flexible polyurethane foam manufactured or supplied by the Defendants. These products include bedding (for example, mattresses, mattress toppers, or pillows) carpet underlay (also called carpet padding or carpet cushion), and upholstered furniture (for example, a sofa with foam cushions).

Plaintiffs claim Defendants engaged in a conspiracy to: (i) increase prices of flexible polyurethane foam and (ii) not compete for, or "allocate," customers. Plaintiffs contend Defendants violated numerous States' antitrust and consumer protection laws. Defendants deny these claims and deny they are liable to Plaintiffs in any way. The Court has not decided who is right.

Who is included in the lawsuit?
YOU are included in the lawsuit and may be entitled to money IF:
1. You purchased one or more of the following products containing flexible polyurethane foam that was manufactured in the United States: upholstered furniture (such as a couch with foam cushions), carpet underlay (foam padding), or bedding products (such as a foam mattress or pillow), and
2. You are the end-user of the product that you purchased, meaning you did not buy it for resale to someone else, and
3. You made your purchase in AL, AZ, CA, CO, DC, FL, HI, IL, IA, KS, ME, MA, MI, MN, MS, MO, NE, NV, NH, NM, NY, NC, ND, OR, RI, SD, TN, VT, WV, or WI, and
4. You made your purchase during the time period January 1, 1999 to August 1, 2015.

What do the Settlements provide?
Defendants in the nine Settlements will pay a total of $151,250,000. If the Plan of Allocation is approved by the Court, payments will be made to each Claimant from each Settlement pro rata based on the number of valid claims filed and the amounts paid for qualifying products. You can obtain more details about the Plan of Allocation at www.PolyFoamClassAction.com, or by calling 1-866-302-7323.

The Settlement Fund may also be used to pay for: (1) the cost to administer the Settlements, (2) attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses, and (3) awards to Class Representative Plaintiffs. Plaintiffs' counsel will request attorneys' fees not to exceed thirty percent (30%) of $151,250,000, plus reimbursement of costs and expenses. The Court will then decide a reasonable fee and expense award.

How can I get a payment?
You must submit a Claim Form to get a payment. You can submit a claim online or by mail. The deadline to submit a claim is FEBRUARY 29, 2016. Claim Forms are available at www.PolyFoamClassAction.com, or by calling 1-866-302-7323.

Who represents you?
The Court has appointed Marvin A. Miller of Miller Law LLC to represent the Plaintiff Class.

What are your options?
1. Participate. If you made purchases that include you in this lawsuit and you do not timely request to be excluded from the Settlements, then you will automatically be bound by the terms of the Settlements. You will also be legally bound by all orders and judgments of the Court. You will not be able to sue the Additional Settling Defendants in any other lawsuit for conspiring to fix prices or allocate customers of flexible polyurethane foam. In order to get a payment from the Settlement Fund, you must submit a Claim Form.

2. Don't Participate. If you do not want to be a part of one or more of the nine Settlements, you may request to be excluded. If you are excluded from a Settlement, you will not be bound by or benefit from that Settlement, or any other Court orders relating to that Settlement, but you will keep your right to sue or resolve your claims on your own against that Additional Settling Defendant. To see the requirements for submitting a valid request to exclude, visit www.PolyFoamClassAction.com, or call 1-866-302-7323. Requests to exclude must be in writing and received by NOVEMBER 25, 2015.

Court Hearing
The Court will hold a hearing to decide whether to approve the nine proposed Settlements. The hearing will be on DECEMBER 15, 2015, at 10:00 a.m. at the Ashley U.S. Courthouse, 1716 Spielbusch Avenue, Toledo, Ohio 43604. The Court may change the date, time, or location of the hearing. To obtain the most up-to-date information regarding the hearing date and location, please visit www.PolyFoamClassAction.com, or call 1-866-302-7323.

If you choose to participate in one or more of the Settlements, you may object to or comment on those Settlements in writing by NOVEMBER 13, 2015. You or your own lawyer may appear and speak at the hearing at your own expense. To see the requirements for filing an Objection, visit www.PolyFoamClassAction.com, or call 1-866-302-7323.

Do you have questions?
If you have questions, want more details, or want to see other documents describing this lawsuit and your rights, visit www.PolyFoamClassAction.com, or call 1-866-302-7323.

My Struggle to Have a Baby

THE COMEDIAN WAS TOLD THERE WAS NO CHANCE SHE COULD BECOME A MOM—BUT SHE'S NOT GIVING UP HOPE

BY PATRICK GOMEZ

Green and her surrogate Shawna Johnson.

GloZell Green knows she has nothing to be self-conscious about. "I didn't know I was supposed to be all hush-hush about it," the YouTube star, 43, says of discussing her fertility issues with her friends—and her almost 3.9 million subscribers. "It made me feel better to talk about it. I wasn't going to be in the closet about this. That's not healthy for anybody."

Green, who is named after both her mother, Gloria, and father Ozell, says she was "always a

HER FIRST HIT

"I drove past an accident and just started talking about it. I thought 10 people would see it," Green recalls of her first viral clip.

CINNAMON CHALLENGE

"I thought, 'No one's gonna watch this stupid video,'" she says of attempting to eat a spoonful of the spice. It's her most-viewed video.

A CHAT WITH OBAMA

"Everything I went through was for this moment," Green says of interviewing the President.

performer" growing up in Orlando. After graduating from the University of Florida, Green and her first husband moved to Los Angeles in 2003 so she could pursue an acting career. Within six months her husband had moved back to Florida. "I didn't know what I was going to do," she says. Single and alone, she busied herself by attending tapings of The Tonight Show with Jay Leno. A blog about her experiences eventually gave way to her lucrative YouTube channel (see sidebar). In 2006 she found love again with retired U.S. Air Force Master Sgt. Kevin Simon, and in August 2013 they were married. At 41 years old, Green was finally "looking to start a family," she says. "But it just wasn't happening."

"They told me there was no hope," says Green, who was diagnosed with endometriosis and told by three different doctors that children might not be in her future because of her age. "But I refused to believe there was no chance." She began making life changes to better her odds of becoming a mom. Despite her "close relationship" with cupcakes, she cut out sugar. She tried cryogenic therapy, acupuncture, even vaginal steaming and crystal-healing sessions. None of it worked. Finally, a fourth doctor suggested the idea of a surrogate. After months of hormone treatments and medical procedures, Green decided she liked the idea of another woman carrying her, as she calls them, "Glo-sicles." Since her chosen surrogate is based in San Francisco, Green, who knows "a lot of bonding happens in those first nine months," says her baby will listen to her videos while in the womb. Adoption is not out of the question, but Green wants to take her "one shot" at being a biological mom first. "I just want to have something to show at the end of this journey," she says. "I know a lot of people are interested to see if it works. I have [fans] who say, 'I was going to try, but….' I tell them, 'I'm trying. I'm doing it. I'm going to become a mom.'" ●

EXCLUSIVE THE HOTTEST STARS ON EARTH (AND BEYOND) TALK ABOUT THEIR MUST-SEE FILMS

FALL MOVIE PREVIEW 2015

THE MARTIAN

STARRING: MATT DAMON, JESSICA CHASTAIN & CHIWETEL EJIOFOR

OCT. 2

Talk about lost in space. Astronaut Mark Watney is abandoned on Mars when he's presumed dead after a storm—and makes like MacGyver to survive. "I loved the story, but you had me at [director] Ridley Scott," says Damon. "I've wanted to work with him my whole life." The two worked to "retain the humor" of Andy Weir's bestseller, Damon says, "but keep it tense."

"It's a survival movie, but you want it to be entertaining," says Damon.

SPECTRE

STARRING: DANIEL CRAIG

NOV. 6

Daniel Craig is back for his fourth mission as James Bond, fighting terrorists around the globe—resulting in scenic mayhem in Mexico City, Rome, London and Austria. With Monica Bellucci and Léa Seydoux adding sultry appeal—and Christoph Waltz as a baddie—"it's classic Bond with a twist," says producer Barbara Broccoli. "There's lots of action, humor and wit."

BY THE SEA

STARRING: ANGELINA JOLIE PITT, BRAD PITT

NOV. 13

Brad and Angelina reunite onscreen for the first time since 2005's Mr. & Mrs. Smith in a drama about a couple confronting marriage problems. Jolie Pitt, who also wrote and directed, says of her husband, "I understand and appreciate his creative process and his work ethic even more than before."

MISS YOU ALREADY

STARRING: DREW BARRYMORE, TONI COLLETTE

NOV. 6

Barrymore and Collette play Jess and Milly, lifelong friends whose bond is tested when Milly is diagnosed with cancer. "A huge part of why I wanted to do this film, as well as honor the subject matter, was wanting to work with Toni Collette," says Barrymore. Director Catherine Hardwicke adds, "The first time Drew and Toni met, honestly, it was magical."

FREEHELD

OCT. 2

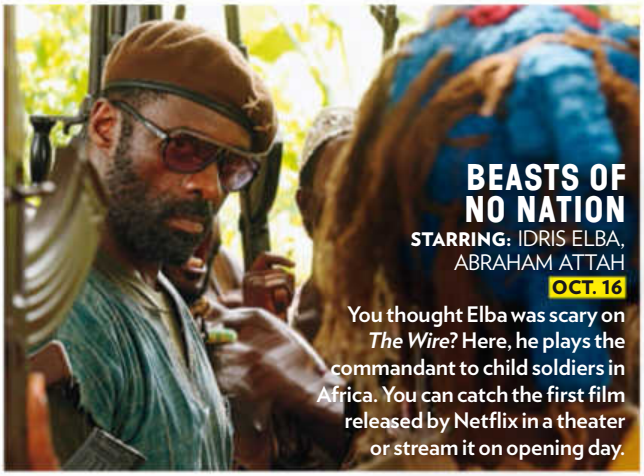
Domestic partners Laurel (Moore) and Stacie (Page) fight for benefits after Laurel is diagnosed with terminal cancer in this real-life drama. "I felt connected to it," Page told Time of the couple's tale. "It had entered me on an emotional level."

THE INTERN

STARRING: ROBERT DE NIRO, ANNE HATHAWAY

SEPT. 25

iPads and texting and Facebook, oh my! In this lighthearted intergenerational comedy, De Niro plays a widowed retiree-turned-tech-intern bossed around by Hathaway, as head of a hip fashion startup. "I feel closer to younger people than I do to people my age," says De Niro.



BEASTS OF NO NATION

STARRING: IDRIS ELBA, ABRAHAM ATTAH

OCT. 16

You thought Elba was scary on The Wire? Here, he plays the commandant to child soldiers in Africa. You can catch the first film released by Netflix in a theater or stream it on opening day.

BLACK MASS

STARRING: JOHNNY DEPP, JOEL EDGERTON, BENEDICT CUMBERBATCH

SEPT. 18

The haunting biopic chronicling the rise and fall of one of South Boston's most infamous crime bosses turns Depp almost unrecognizable as the vicious Whitey Bulger. "His physical transformation was utterly transfixing," says director Scott Cooper. "For him to completely give himself over to Whitey's psyche was mesmerizing."

THE WALK

STARRING: JOSEPH GORDON-LEVITT

OCT. 9

To play Philippe Petit, the French tightrope artist who performed an unauthorized high-wire walk between the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in 1974, Gordon-Levitt really had to learn how to walk the line. Luckily he had the best instructor. "Philippe insisted he teach me himself," the actor says. "He set up an elaborate eight-day workshop and said, 'By the end, you will walk on this wire by yourself.' He was right."

EVEREST

STARRING: JAKE GYLLENHAAL, JASON CLARKE, JOSH BROLIN

SEPT. 18

No added drama needed for this true tale of several climbers who got caught in a blizzard atop Mount Everest on May 10, 1996. As the cast shot in Nepal and the Italian Alps, Gyllenhaal says, "There were all these crazy storms. It was freezing, but I've never had so much fun filming."

OUR BRAND IS CRISIS

STARRING: SANDRA BULLOCK, BILLY BOB THORNTON

OCT. 30

Bullock says she plays a "female Karl Rove" in this drama about U.S. campaign consultants working a Latin American election. Thornton is her rival, and her pal George Clooney produced.

STARRING: MICHAEL FASSBENDER, KATE WINSLET

OCT. 9

What season is it? Awards season, particularly with Michael Fassbender playing Apple icon Jobs under the direction of Danny Boyle, (Slumdog Millionaire) and with a script by Aaron Sorkin (The Social Network). Think big.

BRIDGE OF SPIES

STARRING: TOM HANKS, ALAN ALDA, AMY RYAN

OCT. 16

The only thing fancier than the cast in this Cold War thriller is the team behind it. The Coen brothers cowrote the script about a lawyer (Hanks) recruited by the CIA to help rescue a pilot (Mark Rylance) held by the Soviets. Steven Spielberg directs. You hardly need to be in the intelligence game to see Oscar potential on this Bridge.

PAN

STARRING: HUGH JACKMAN, LEVI MILLER

OCT. 9

This origin story explores how a 12-year-old orphan became Peter Pan, battling Jackman's Blackbeard. "It's about a kid who is discovering his potential and power—but also his powerlessness," says director Joe Wright.

MINDY KALING

Sriracha Cheeseburger

THE MINDY PROJECT STAR CREATED THIS EXCLUSIVE RECIPE WITH UMAMI BURGER—AVAILABLE AT RESTAURANTS STARTING SEPT. 1

'Spicy and cheesy, it reflects my own personality!'
—MINDY KALING

FOOD STYLIST: ERIN MERHAR; PROP STYLIST: CAROLINE CUNNINGHAM; INSET: CINDY ORD/GETTY IMAGES

The Mindy Burger

- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 tbsp. Sriracha hot sauce
- ½ lemon, juiced
- 1½ tbsp. butter, melted
- 4 brioche buns, halved
- 1½ lbs. ground beef, shaped into 4-in. patties
- 1 tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. black pepper
- 4 slices white cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup pickled jalapeño slices
- ¼ cup onion strings (recipe below)

1. To make the Sriracha aioli, whisk together mayo, garlic, Sriracha and lemon juice in a bowl. Chill until ready to use.
2. Brush butter on both cut sides of buns and place on a hot pan or grill to toast.
3. Season burger patties evenly with salt and pepper. In a large heavy-bottom pan over medium-high heat, cook burgers about 4 minutes, until well seared on one side. Flip and cook another 3 minutes. Top with cheese slices and let melt, about 1 minute.
4. To assemble, spread aioli on top and bottom buns. Place burgers on top with jalapeños, more aioli and onion strings.
Makes: 4 burgers
Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 10 minutes

Onion Strings

- 1 large yellow onion, cut into thin strips
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1 cup flour or tempura flour
- ½ tsp. smoked paprika
- Vegetable oil
- Pinch smoked salt

1. Soak onion strips in buttermilk for about 3 hours. Drain and discard buttermilk.
2. Combine flour and paprika in a bowl, and toss in onion strips until well coated.
3. In small batches, fry onion strings in 1½ in. hot oil (375°) until crispy and light brown, about 1 minute. Drain on paper-towel-lined plate. Season with smoked salt. Makes: 1 cup

N.Y.C. HOT SPOT

TWO COASTS COLLIDE at chef Justin Smillie's restaurant, which offers California-inspired cuisine in a New York City setting. Since opening less than a year ago, the chic eatery with cozy green banquettes, copper accents and shelves filled with jars of preserved lemons has attracted a slew of A-list stars—including a visit from President Barack Obama and daughters Sasha and Malia in July. At the restaurant, named after the Southern California town where Smillie grew up, the chef and his partner, restaurateur Stephen Starr, bring a "straightforward approach to cooking" with entrees like slow-roasted pork with tomatillos and mushrooms and classic pasta dishes like cacio e pepe. "It's the way I want to eat," says the author of the upcoming cookbook Slow Fires. "It's not always what you add to a dish but what you take away. I want to respect the simplest pleasures."

JUSTIN SMILLIE

Cacio e Pepe

THE CHEF SHARES A RECIPE FOR ONE OF UPLAND'S MOST POPULAR DISHES

- 1 stick butter, softened
- 1½ tsp. black pepper
- ⅛ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- ¼ cup grated pecorino romano cheese, divided
- 8 oz. bucatini pasta
- Sea salt

1. Mix butter, pepper, Parmesan and half of the pecorino in a small bowl. Set aside.
2. In a large pot, cook the pasta in salted water, 7 to 9 minutes or until just al dente.
3. Drain the noodles and reserve ¼ cup hot pasta water.
4. Pour half the cheese mixture into a large mixing bowl. Add in half the pasta and mix until the cheese and butter mixture melts. Add pasta water as needed. Season with salt to taste. Repeat with the remaining noodles and cheese mixture. Sprinkle with leftover pecorino. Serve immediately.

Serves: 2-4
Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 10 minutes

Tip!
'I personally can't live without flaky sea salt,' says Smillie. 'It creates bursts of delicate saltiness while adding textural intrigue at the same time.'

PATTI STANGER

What I Eat in a Day

'I'M ALL ABOUT LOW-FAT, HIGH-PROTEIN, GLUTEN-FREE FOODS,' SAYS THE 5'8" MILLIONAIRE MATCHMAKER STAR, 54, WHO CREATED P.S. MATCH WINES

Hydration

Water with lemon in the morning, two large bottles of water throughout the day

Breakfast

Smoothie with frozen banana and pineapple, coconut water with pineapple and a scoop of Jay Robb vanilla whey protein powder

Tip!
'A smoothie is a fast, easy way to get protein on the run,' says Glassman. 'You stay satisfied longer and end up eating less during the day.'

Snack

Tall Starbucks nonfat chai latte and a Lara Bar

Lunch

Large green salad with ginger dressing, two spicy tuna avocado hand rolls with soy paper

Dinner

Blue Sky stevia soda root beer, 3-oz. skirt steak with Jocko's Mix Seasoning and F.McLintocks cowboy salsa, palm-size portion of quinoa

Late-night snack

One glass of my sweet red P.S. Match wine with Good Karma Organic Rice Divine nondairy ice cream in Mudd Pie

Total Calories: 1,346

The Verdict "I love that her breakfast contains protein," says dietitian Keri Glassman of NutritiousLife.com, who also praises Stanger for her veggie-filled lunch. Stanger's snacks help "keep energy up," but Glassman would prefer a banana with nut butter. "Patti should look closely at the labels of the packaged foods she eats," says Glassman. "Sugar is sneaking in all over the place!"

TAMERA MOWRY-HOUSLEY

'I am so blessed'

"Aden has his moments, but he literally asks to kiss her every day," says Mowry-Housley.

WHEN SHE FOUND OUT SHE WAS HAVING A GIRL, Tamera Mowry-Housley was a bit apprehensive. "I was a little freaked out because I have friends who have girls who are preteens now, and all they do is tell me their stories," says the 37-year-old cohost of The Real. But now she's completely smitten with her "mini-me" daughter Ariah Talea. "She looks so much like me as a baby it's scary—it's the eyes and the droopy cheeks!" They also have similar temperaments. "She's a mellow baby," says the TV star of her 2-month-old, whose first name means "Lion of God." "Aden [her 2½-year-old son] is high-energy like my husband, Adam, so I think we're balanced now." Mowry-Housley admits that having two kids is a big adjustment, but sharing the work with her hands-on husband makes it more fun. "You're going to have great days, and you're going to have challenging days, but it's a blessing," she says. "I love my little family. I really do." Especially when she experiences all of her daughter's milestones: "The first time she sees me in the morning, she smiles. It melts me!"

THE ACTRESS, 32, STARS IN THE NEW FAITH-BASED FILM 90 MINUTES IN HEAVEN

Last moment of bliss
Probably this morning when I was able to sleep as late as I wanted for the first time in several weeks. I just fell into bed thinking it's blissful to know that I can sleep all day if I want to.

Last guilty pleasure
I just bought a pair of Chanel boots that were a pretty costly guilty pleasure, but I feel like things that are more expensive are the ones that will last a long time. And Chanel is such a classic. It was like half guilty.

Last time I baked
I love to cook, but I'm a terrible baker. It's incredibly maddening because I can follow a recipe and it turns out disastrous, where my husband [director Michael Polish] never uses a recipe, and it's always brilliant and delicious.

Last time I was starstruck
I took my stepdaughter Jasper to see Taylor Swift's 1989 concert, and we got to chat with her afterward. She's just incredibly kind. We didn't stop dancing the whole show, and I'm not joking. It was truly that much fun.

Last road trip
My friend Jen and I drove from L.A. to Montreal for this show I'm doing [Crackle's The Art of More]. I'd never driven cross-country so we threw my two dogs, Sissy and Happy, in the back, packed the car up and made a trip out of the journey to come.
